Term 3 Week 7

Principal News:

This week it has been fantastic to see our students engaged in their learning on Seesaw, working independently, writing some super stories, staying active, sharing videos and creating some exceptional works of art.

On Wednesday Ms Sexton led our students in a sing-along, which was great fun, with over 50 students joining in. We will get together next Wednesday to sing again.

We have been using video-calls this week, so that students can catch up with friends and stay connected with their teacher and each other. Details are posted on your child's Seesaw accounts and students are really enjoying these – I encourage all of our students to join in.

We will hold an online assembly on Monday at 9:30 am – the link will be sent out via Seesaw. We hope to see you there.

I would like to thank our parents and staff for their efforts during remote learning. You are all doing an amazing job!

Have a great weekend!

Anthony Tait

What a fantastic week of remote learning Stringybark students and families. It has been wonderful to see all of your fabulous work you have posted online and I am so proud of you all. Today was a bit of a fun day building forts, writing about what has made us laugh this week and playing board games with your families. WebEx meetings were great this week, students were super happy to see each other. We will be having a Lego Masters Challenge next week.

I hope you all have a wonderful weekend.

Well done to everyone in the Peppermint Gums studio. Everyone has been working extremely hard and completing work to the best of their ability. This week we have focused on: reading with fluency and expression, identifying nouns, verbs and adjectives, planning and writing stories with detailed settings, editing, publishing our writing into picture story books, multiplication number sentences and algorithms, skip counting goals, completing a variety of sporting activities and following instructions to create some great pieces of art.

Today we had our first Zoom show and tell sessions. It was fun to see and hear about each student's favourite toy. Well done Peppermint Gums studio, keep up the great work!

Hello Blue Gum Families,

During remote learning we have been learning about probability and chance in math as we have been exploring things that are impossible, unlikely, even chance, likely and certain. In reading we have been practising on reading with fluency and expression, while making connections with our reading by connection with other texts, our self, and the world.

In writing we have been working on improving our vocabulary by breaking down and solving words in combination with finding synonyms and antonyms for our word of the day. In writing we have also had a focus on figurative language, specifically similes and metaphors and how to use them in our writing.

I have picked some awards for some of the students from Blue Gums:

- Dolly and Amber: for continuing to build upon their writing skills and producing a spectacular writing piece.
- Chelsea: for producing work that is to the best of her ability and is always challenging herself to improve her learning.
- Lachy and Will: for persevering when things get difficult and using a positive growth mindset.

I hope you have a great weekend and see you all next week!

Miss Burns 😊

"Hey kid, give me your lunch money" VOCALISED the RUFFIAN.

"N..no never" said the new kid. "Why should I?" asked the new kid.

"Listen here kid... you really don't have a choice... I WILL NOT BE IGNORED" yelled the bully. "YOU DON'T HAVE A CHOICE" blared the tyrant from the top of his lungs.

'The new kids turns his back and walks away from the bully'

"Hey kid where do you think your going huh? the bully observed.

"Well surley far away from you as you can see" the new kid replied back to the bully. The new kid then sped away from the bully, and made it to the principles office, just in time to explain to him what the bully was doing.

BUT that didn't stop the bully from bolting in the office at the same time as the new kid and both coliding into the principle.

"What are you boys doing?" exclaimed the principle. The bully replied with "ahhh nothing sir" after feeling humiliated. The Prinicple said tempestuously "DETENTION NOW, you know your not meant to be running in the halls at school". The boys both looked down at their feet in dismay and replied with "yes sir".

Bang the door slammed shut “I want another one, he’s not good enough!” The girl screamed full of rage.

“ Go Dynamite! Hurry up or we will lose!” The young girl yelled, she was no older than 13 yet she looked much older sitting up tall in the brown leather saddle, there was a straight line from her arm to the bit and her eyes never looked anywhere else but to where her next jump was looming ahead despite the onlookers forming on the side lines. The black stallion had had enough of the girls attempts of getting him up the bank, water was simply never his strength. One last kick sent the girl flying over his head and into the pond below.

“ Mellissa how are we to afford all this! We barely have enough to keep the house!” The man asked trying to keep his voice down “it will be fine trust me” the woman said reassuringly.

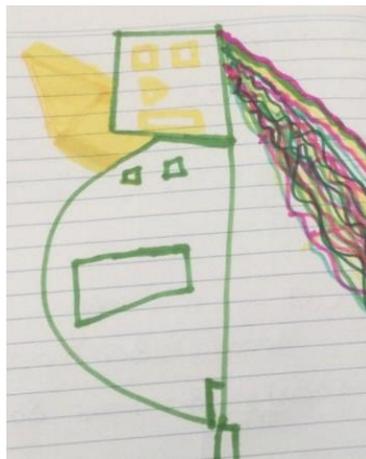

Knock, knock “Ava are you there?” The man said cautiously
“What do you want?” Ava yelled
“things have been tough lately and we unfortunately need to sell Dynamite” the moment the man said it he knew he shouldn’t have
“WHAT! You cant he’s mine not yours!”

“ This is the last time I will ever ride you” Ava murmured into the horses big black ears as she bucked up the throat lash the horses ears swivelled around to where she was standing. she lead him out by the reins to the wooden mounting block, she put one foot in and swung her other leg over so that now she had both feet in the stirrups. She clucked him on to a steady walk around the arena. By the time the silver float was pulling into the driveway she had dismounted and given him a brush so that he was now looking very grand with his navy blue stable rug on and his mane plaited. The people snatched his lead and lead him up the ramp and onto the float.

It had been months since Dynamite had been taken away and every day that had passed Ava missed him. Little did she know that Dynamite wasn't coming back.
